Metropolitan Opera star Eric Owens portrays the title role in Felix Mendelssohn's dramatic and powerful oratorio Elijah, a story of powerful, warring personalities and miraculous events told through some of the most beautiful and sublime music of the 19th century.

“Eric Owens brought a burnished and powerful voice to his sensitive performance...”

A Gaelic Gathering,
Máire Clerkin, Artistic Director
The Irish Pleasures Band
John Alexander, conducting

Raise a pint with the John Alexander Singers, as we celebrate St. Patrick's Day with a rousing concert of Irish folk song! Toe-tapping step dancers and a rollicking Celtic band round out the festivities, transforming Samueli Theater into Alexander's Irish Pub for two nights only. Selections include "Tune from County Derry," "She Moved Through the Fair," "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "Wearin' of the Green," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," "The Last Rose of Summer" and "Danny Boy."

"Alexander pulled together a consistently surprising program. Enough complexity to give the Irish folk spirit a full hearing, enough simplicity and modesty to preserve its often pained emotional core."

Ralph Vaughan Williams' moonlit serenade from The Merchant of Venice provides a radiant introduction to a selection of music invoking rivers, seas and stary nights, including the world premiere of The Shore, composer Frank Ticheli's first work for chorus and orchestra, featuring text by poet David St. John.

*Until the stars run to milk
Until the earth divides
Until these waves no longer
Rake the headland sands*

*Until the sea is dead
Here is the place I'll stand
With the moon & the waves
In each open hand*
