Survive the Collapse is a fast-selling guide designed to help normal people prepare for the collapse of society. Written by Jeff Anderson, president of the International Society of Close Quarter Combatants, the program is an urban survival guide that's accessible to the masses.

Anderson says his guide is a must read for anyone who wants to survive economic collapse. His program is a preparation guide that tackles a number of scenarios, from global warfare and riots to surviving the collapse of society as a whole.

"Many people laugh at the prospect of a breakdown in civil order," Anderson said. "All you have to do is watch the news to know it's happened before and rest assured, it will happen again."

Survive the Collapse is only available online and includes lessons on how to evade martial law, survive a riot, select the right weapons, rig the proper bug-out equipment - even ward off looters and escape dangerous urban meltdowns.

To help people prepare right away, Anderson has posted some exclusive tips available for free on his website. The in-depth covers the survival of urban apocalypse from every angle and he says joining his program will help people ensure their families are safe if the economy tanks and America descends into chaos.

To celebrate the publishing of his latest guide, Anderson is offering customers a free bonus, "How to Survive a Flash Mob Riot," which includes an in-depth ebook as well as an audio guide that allows listeners to learn on the go.

"The details of this program and the actions we reveal are not for the faint of heart," Anderson said. "But drastic times require drastic measures and we hold nothing back in this one-of-a-kind program."
