Seattle, WA, September 20, 2012 - JogoCast (<http://www.jogocast.com>) announced today a new Android soccer app to share soccer games in the age of mobile social sports media. JogoCast Soccer for Android provides a place for people to come together and support their local recreational soccer teams, even if they can't be there in person. Harnessing the power of social media for internet soccer, JogoCast lets fans keep track of as much of or as little of the game as they want or even crowdsource soccer game tracking with other people at the game.

JogoCast was created to give recreational soccer fans the ability to share the game with family, friends, relatives, and alumni in an easy, fast, and fun way. Now viewing live soccer scores, play-by-play feeds, and teams is as simple as starting JogoCast Soccer on an Android phone, iPhone, Mac, or PC.

JogoCast Android Soccer App: Instant Soccer Scores, Instant Internet Soccer Games

With JogoCast there is no delay when following a soccer game. Whenever anyone updates the game, the information is sent to everyone following the game at the same time. Real time updating allows everyone to experience the excitement of being part of the game no matter where they happen to be. Fans everywhere see live soccer scores and can cheer for players.

JogoCast not only updates itself, but allows fans to send updates via Facebook, Twitter, email, and text messaging. Fans can, with a tap of a button, send updates through any of these services so people can be kept up to date on the game on their favorite social media service. This means that never again will anyone be left in the dark about how their team is doing.
