Respected online marketing trainer Mike Bashi have just launched his new training website offering useful web hosting guidelines to online business owners. Becoming a member of this program is absolutely free and requires only a valid email address. Mike Bashi is a well known personality in the online business fraternity who has developed several highly successful training programs in the past. Hostmonopoly.com is different from any other training website because it is an excellent combination of a training and review website. Moreover, this website has been created by Mike after reviewing all hosting services, instead of relying on market feedback.

Thousands of online business owners continuously look for a cost efficient web hosting service because the credibility of a business in the online marketplace depends a great deal on the quality of hosting. Michael Bashi has used all hosting services for a minimum period of one month to test their features. According to him, the most important features to check before choosing a website host are server reliability, unlimited domain, fourth generation hosting, and round the clock technical support. Hostmonopoly.com makes the job easy for the business owners by revealing the name of the best website host through the free video.

Reliable sources have revealed that many aspiring business owners have already become a free member of this excellent web hosting program by offering their email address. Kevin, one of the latest members of the program expressed his gratitude towards Mike Bashi. "I have lost valuable time and money since last few months looking for a website hosting service for my websites. Host Monopoly has solved all my website hosting related concerns for once and all", he says.

About Hostmonopoly.com: Hostmonopoly.com is a review website launched by noted business consultant Michael Bashi. This website helps entrepreneurs find out the best web hosting service provider with a comprehensive, free training video.
