Blue turquoise website is the latest to highlight this popular and beautiful stone.

Blue turquoise jewelry facts and the details about the stone are on display at a new website launched to teach visitors more about the composition and value of turquoise.

"I wanted to share my passion of blue turquoise with the rest of the world and this website seemed like the perfect opportunity to do so," said Zaniel Worth, who just launched the site. "I've only really started to scratch the surface, but there's a ton of good information up already."

Visitors will have access to information about the properties of turquoise as well as the different color combinations that make it such a unique mineral that is becoming increasingly popular as time goes on. Readers can discover what primary elements contribute to the color, hardness and composition of turquoise.

There are also sections that focus on the price of turquoise and what factors play a role in determining the price, including purity, color and geography. The information found at BlueTurquoise.net is hard to find and can now be discovered in one location.

"The thing that really sets this site apart is the fact that so much information is available on one place," Worth said. "Otherwise, someone could spend hours scouring the internet, magazines and scholarly journals trying to find all the information I've compiled in one spot."

Readers will not only have the opportunity to gain new knowledge about blue turquoise, but also get a new perspective about the turquoise jewelry market and what styles are the most popular. Anyone interested in the style of jewelry that are most popular right now may be interested in this site.
