Chemical Management Company Launches New System Overview Video

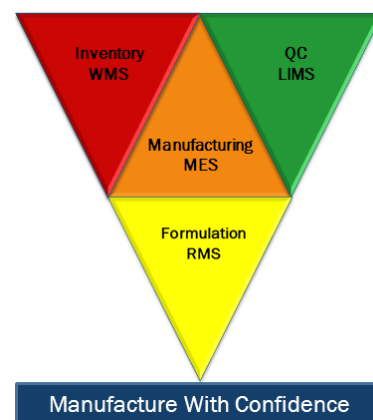

Valdata Systems publishes video describing the features and benefits of Chemical Management Systems

November 6, 2012: Valdata Systems, the company behind the popular “CMS” Chemical Management System, has launched a new video overview explaining in detail the function and benefits of Chemical Management Systems.

The video succeeds in answering the most common questions related to chemical management software, including: what this type of system does; how return on investment can be calculated; and how to implement inventory software, manufacturing execution, formulation and lims.

“One of the most popular questions we get is ‘What do you do’? Because this type of system deals with so many areas of manufacturing, it is difficult to explain the complete impact of this type of system in one sentence. This video helps to answer the question of what a chemical management system does, and how it brings value to every manufacturer who uses this type of technology.” Tom Winter, President

The video can be found both on You Tube and on the Valdata Systems website at:
