

New Site Tackles Abuse Treatment Centers from All Angles

Abuse treatment centers put in spotlight and under microscope, says Landau

Millions of Americans cope with drug, alcohol or some other form of addiction-related problems. There are hundreds, if not thousands, of abuse treatment centers in the United States. But how can one determine what type of facility will ultimately place them on the road to sobriety?

A brand new website is dedicated to shining the spotlight on abuse treatment centers in the United States, and no stone is left unturned in the search for top rehab facilities.

“The substance abuse problem is seemingly a never-ending epidemic in the U.S.,” said site spokesman Johnny Landau. “Our goal was to create a place where friends and family members of addicts – or even addicts themselves – can go to get the help they need.”

Treating and overcoming addiction can be a very long and painful process, and some abuse treatment centers may not be entirely forthright about their services and facilities. Failing to select the right treatment center could delay and ultimately destroy chances for recovery.

“Choosing from one of the hundreds of abuse treatment centers can be a daunting task,” said Landau. “By putting them under the microscope all in one place, already burdened addicts and their families will have one less thing to worry about.”

All forms and types of abuse treatment centers are covered, including inpatient and outpatient programs and facilities. For some, selecting the right facility is literally a life-or-death decision.

“The importance on picking the right facility cannot be understated,” said Landau. “Addicts have taken a huge first step by admitting they need help and we want to return the favor.”

For much more information and ways to find help, please visit abusetreatmentcenters.net.