

5 Questions To See If You Have a Drug Problem

The state of California has a massive and extremely diverse population with many different people coming from various cultural, socio-economic, and educational backgrounds.

In the last 20 years the number of people who take prescription drugs illegally has increased by over 500% in the United States. The number of deaths caused by drug overdose has also increased over 500%. Each day in California there are an estimated 11 deaths caused by drug abuse.

Over the last several decades, drug use and the types of drugs used has skyrocketed in Orange County and the surrounding areas and put an increasing strain on local budgets, law enforcement and health care providers. Orange County has had to work to at finding unique solutions to an ever growing problem.

How can you tell if you are an addict?
Answer a few simple questions.

1. Are drugs or alcohol causing problems in your family relations?
2. Do you usually spend most of your time with people that do drugs?
3. Do you need to take more than you used at first in order to get high?
4. Do you feel sick or extremely anxious if you try to quit?
5. Are you experiencing problems at work or school?

These are just a few questions to help you determine if you have a drug or alcohol problem. It is not an indictment. There is help available to anyone who needs it. As the number of addictions has grown substantially in California over the past years, so have the number of rehabs. The treatment facilities I Orange County provide help to California residents and many out of state persons as well.

For anyone seeking drug or alcohol rehabilitation in California, there are many treatment options available. No one is condemned to struggling with an addiction issue in California without help. The Orange County Rehabs has operators available 24 hours a day 7 days a week to help callers find the treatment that they need. More information can be found by visiting their website www.orangecountyrehabs.com

Orange County Rehabs

866 422 3770