

SilverTribe Unveils New Green Turquoise Jewelry for New Year

Online Leader in Native American Art and Jewelry Showcasing New Southwest Turquoise Collection

The holiday season has ended and the year 2012 is in the rearview mirror. Along with the new year comes fresh starts, fresh changes, new looks and new resolutions. With new changes and looks comes new fashion and accessories.

Now, the online leader in Native American art and jewelry is rolling out a new green turquoise jewelry collection for 2013.

“First and foremost, we hope everyone had a safe and healthy holiday season,” said SilverTribe spokesman Chris Anderson. “With that being said, what better time than the start of the new year to roll out some new collections that we believe will be some of the most popular in fashion in 2013.”

In addition to the green turquoise collection, SilverTribe has unveiled a stunning new southwest turquoise collection just in time for the new year.

“Turquoise jewelry was very popular during the gift-giving season,” said Anderson. “Those who were fortunate enough to receive some may be looking to expand or accessorize their collection. Those who weren’t so fortunate can be among the first to have the hottest styles for the new year!”

SilverTribe is an online leader in Native American and Southwestern art and jewelry. In addition to the breathtaking turquoise collections, visitors can find Hopi jewelry, Navajo-style jewelry, Kachinas, pottery and so much more. SilverTribe offers low prices, expedited shipping and the best customer service in the business.

Anderson is also encouraging both new and long-time customers to sign up for the Preferred Member program. Preferred Members are the first to know about the newest pieces and special discounted offers.

To see the latest in green turquoise jewelry or the brand new southwest turquoise collection, please visit SilverTribe.com.