

Exceltemplates.net Offers Complimentary 2013 Calendar to Celebrate Beginning of New Year

Website adds 2013 Calendar to Vast Collection of Complimentary Templates and Spreadsheets

The holiday season is over, the ball has long since dropped and the curtain has been lifted on 2013. With the end of the year comes the time to turn the page on a new calendar.

Now, a website specializing in Excel templates and spreadsheets is offering a new 2013 calendar that is completely free of charge.

“We say out with the old and in with the new,” said Excel Templates spokeswoman Rita Flagen. “We know most people are in search of a new calendar for the new year. With our complimentary calendar, we want to play a part in helping people begin the year on a positive note.”

There are multiple 2013 calendar Excel template options available on the site. People can select between a 12-month calendar, a one-month calendar and even a weekly calendar. Flagen says no matter which one of the options you choose, everyone will pay the same amount.

“We know different people prefer different ways of keeping track of their schedule and daily activities,” said Flagen. “That’s why we offer a variety of options – all of which are complimentary”

The 2013 calendar Excel template is just one of dozens of complimentary templates the site has added in the last week alone. Coffee shop business plans, food truck business plans, and a loan amortization spreadsheet are just some of the helpful tools that are now available. Flagen says the site is constantly adding to its collection so visitors are encouraged to stop by on a consistent basis.

“The needs of consumers change and grow on a daily basis,” said Flagen. “We are here to serve the consumers and we will grow and expand right along with them.”

To get a new 2013 calendar Excel template, or for hundreds of other complimentary templates and spreadsheets, please visit Exceltemplates.net.