

Washington Home Alarm Systems for Households without Landline Telephone Introduced by Elite Security Services

Elite Security Services has just launched an advanced package in the Washington home alarm systems market for homeowners that do not use a landline telephone. The package known as the Elite plan is equipped with digital cellular technology to communicate with ADT monitoring stations. This plan is now available all over the state for a monthly rental of $44.99 per month.

Landline telephones are no longer essential to enjoy the benefits of Washington home alarm systems installed by Elite Security Services. The company has recently introduced their popular Elite package of home protection throughout the state. This package uses the latest cellular backup technology to keep the security systems operational without a basic telephone line. The company has emerged within a year as one of the most preferred security service providers in the country. Their security service is well known for technological brilliance and affordable price range. The Elite plan from Elite Security Services is now available throughout California for $44.99 per month.

The introduction of Elite package from the company is expected to receive excellent response from the Washington home alarm systems industry. The traditional security systems offered by most service providers in this region require a landline telephone connection. This has restricted many homeowners in Washington from availing security service for their home. The dependence on basic telephone line also raises a serious question mark about the efficiency of the security systems because they can be deactivated easily by the burglars by disconnecting the line. Elite security plan from Elite Security Services is the perfect solution to these problems because it communicates using a technology similar to the one used in mobile phones and has nothing to do with landline telephones.

Washington home alarm systems users have welcomed the launch of this new service plan from Elite Security Services. Introducing this amazing security plan, the owner of the company, Mr. Paul Shakuri said, "Though this plan is designed specifically for households without landline telephone, it can be equally useful for all. This system provides you round the clock protection in the true sense because it can not be deactivated by disconnection of telephone line".

About the Company: Elite Security Services is a rapidly growing company in the home security industry. They offer highly efficient and economical home security solutions in America and Canada.
