

Opportunities in the India Composites Market: 2012-2017 Trend, Forecast, and Competitive Analysis

Description: According to this report, despite the high cost of raw material, scarce availability of many essential materials due to import restrictions, and the lack of mechanized processes, the Indian composites industry posted substantial growth from 2006-2011. The market is expected to continue its strong growth momentum to reach approximately US $1.8 billion by 2017 with a CAGR of 14.9% over the next Five years.

Lucintel's research indicates that the higher market growth is due to the emerging Indian economy and increasing demand in domestic consumption and production as well. Future markets are expected to be highly competitive and companies with innovative capabilities can thrive and gain market share. The composites industry has become highly volatile in the short term, and global financial uncertainties or political instability can bring sudden changes to the marketplace. In the long term, the composites industry is considered extremely viable with more than 5,000 composites applications worldwide with great growth potential.

The composites industry in India is characterized by a large number of players in end-use applications. Tremendous competition among the players in individual categories allows very little room for price maneuvering by individual manufacturers in any sector, whether it is pipe and tank, railway, or auto components. Almost every sector, however, has market leaders that operate at a comparatively larger scale and employ automated processes, nevertheless falling short of the total market demand.

This market research report provides an overview of trend scenarios and forecast statistics for five years; presents industry drivers and challenges; and surveys the opportunities for composites growth in India. This study is designed to benefit composites manufacturers, material suppliers, and the end user market, such as automotive, consumer goods, and industrial goods, among others, where fiber reinforced material usage is increasing as demand for lightweight, high-strength product is emerging.
