Acumen and LoadSpring introduce new partnership delivering project analytics software in hosted environment

AUSTIN, Texas ---Acumen (www.projectacumen.com) announces a new partnership with LoadSpring to offer customers a trusted option for software hosting.

LoadSpring is a leading company providing implementation, hosting, security and support for project management software solutions. Their offerings benefit customers wanting the schedule diagnostics, risk analytics, and project optimization capabilities of the Acumen software suite provided in a hosted web environment.

A partnership with LoadSpring further expands the flexibility the Acumen software suite already provides by broadening its deployment options.

LoadSpring clients will be able to deploy the Acumen software suite on an advanced web portal where analytics, reporting, and views can be shared quickly and easily with other company users.

“I am excited to partner with LoadSpring because of its dedication to supporting project management software users and dedicated expert capability. At Acumen, we’re confident that the partnership will give our users the seamless web availability they require,” said Acumen CEO and President Dr. Dan

Patterson.

The benefits of a web-based deployment to an increasingly mobile workforce are apparent. With access to the Acumen software suite, project analysis and risk management can take place anytime, anywhere. Working on-site and with remote teams and on-site will be more convenient, more accurate, and faster.

Headquartered in Austin, Texas, Acumen was born from a recognized need for improved project performance insight and vision, integrating both schedule and cost. Through the use of project analytical techniques and best practices, Acumen is a project management company that is second to none in providing an insight into not only project challenges but more importantly, through analytics, an effective means of solving them.

Dedicated to the seamless implementation and deployment of project management software, LoadSpring solutions focuses on streamlining software decision making for their clients and offering solutions which boost productivity and provide a high return on investment. With industry-leading service and support, LoadSpring has become a recognized leader in the industry.
