NurseTogether.com is One of the Top 100 Twitter Accounts for Nurses to Follow

Top Online Nursing Community's Twitter Account Makes the List of the Top 100 Twitter Feeds Every Nurse Should Follow

April 24, 2013, Charlotte, NC — NurseTogether.com, one of the most popular online communities for nursing professionals, announced today that it has made the "Top 100 Twitter Feeds Every Nurse Should Follow" list. The list was compiled by OnlineNursePractitionerPrograms.com, a site dedicated to connecting prospective nurse practitioner students to accredited online degree programs.

"Bringing nurses together – that's always been the focus of NurseTogether.com and I'm pleased that we have been recognized as one of the top nursing twitter feeds," Jenny Solcruz, NurseTogether.com Vice President said. "Social media is a great tool to reach the thousands of nurses around the country and around the world. We will do our part to continuously spread the message of nurses empowering and encouraging each other and always exploring the opportunities available in the nursing professional."

Since the inception of NurseTogether.com's Twitter page, the online nursing community has gained more than 15,000 followers.

"It's a reflection of NurseTogether.com's increasing popularity as well as the nursing community's need for relevant information concerning the nursing lifestyle," Steve Curtin, Vice President of NurseTogether.com said. "Social media is an important aspect of our mission to address that need."

NurseTogether.com's Twitter feed is a mix of inspirational tweets, articles that motivate nurses and celebrate nursing, and links to great job openings within the nursing community. You can follow NurseTogether.com at @NurseTogether or visit its newly revamped website, NurseTogether.com.
