ABOUT THE SPEAKER

Dr. Lisa D. Delpit

Currently the Felton G. Clark Professor of Education at Southern University in Baton Rouge, Lisa D. Delpit is the former Executive Director/Eminent Scholar for the Center for Urban Education & Innovation at Florida International University, Miami, Florida. Originally from Baton Rouge, Louisiana, she is a nationally and internationally-known speaker and writer whose work has focused on the education of children of color. This work was cited as a contributor to her receiving a MacArthur "Genius" Award in 1990.

Dr. Delpit is particularly interested in teaching and learning in multicultural societies, having spent time studying these issues in Alaska, Papua New Guinea, Fiji, Hungary and in various urban and rural sites in the continental United States.

Her numerous awards include the Harvard University Graduate School of Education 1993 Alumni Award for Outstanding Contribution to Education; the 1994 American Educational Research Association Cattell Award for Outstanding Early Career Achievement; 1998 Sunny Days Award from Sesame Street Productions for her contributions to the lives of children; and the 2001 Kappa Delta Phi Laureate Award for her contribution to the education of teachers. She was also selected as the Antioch College Horace Mann Humanity Award recipient for 2003, which recognizes a contribution by alumni who have "won some victory for humanity."

Her most recent book, Multiplication is for White People: Raising Expectations for Other People's Children was released in March, 2012. An earlier book, Other People's Children, has received the American Educational Studies Association's "Book Critic Award," Choice Magazine's Eighth Annual Outstanding Academic Book Award, and has been named "A Great Book" by Teacher Magazine. Some of her other books include: The Real Ebonics Debate: Power, Language, and the Education of African-American Children; and The Skin That We Speak: Thoughts on Language and Culture in the Classroom.
