

People facing life-threatening illnesses and shattered dreams need an example of hope; to see someone who has been down a similar path before. In the new book and DVD, Run to Win, Todd Billingsley shares the inspiring story of his wife, cancer survivor and amputee Missy Koch Billingsley.

FOR MISSY

Your life before discovering you had cancer was quite active. What sports did you play?

Growing up in Miami, your name appeared in the sports section of the Miami Herald often. Tell us about that.

What was your feeling when you heard you had cancer and had to have an amputation?

You had lost all hope of fulfilling the two largest passions of your life - running, and raising a family of your own? How did you find motivation to keep moving forward?

Does having a prosthesis prevent you from doing anything you'd like to do?

What would you say was the biggest help to you in dealing with your setbacks?

You adopted three children from Ukraine all at once...how did that feel going from being childless to a mother of three overnight?

How long have you been without cancer?

Do you feel like you've missed out on anything in life?

FOR TODD

You came into Missy's life right after her battle with cancer. What were your thoughts about dating a cancer survivor and amputee?

Do you have any fear that Missy's cancer will return?

How did the idea for RUN TO WIN come about?

The book comes with a DVD...how does that fit with the book?

You're a composer by profession, so you composed the soundtrack also?

Tell us about the song Run to You.

The two of you are involved with with an organization called Angel Flight. Tell us about that. What is Angel Flight?

How are you involved with Angel Flight?
