Ten Minute Pages a web page building software system for internet marketers has just been released to the public creating an explosion of excitement around the internet and drawing an investigative review from HonestyFirstReviews.com's Tiffany Hendricks.

"Attractive, high converting web pages are an essential requirement for any internet marketing business," report Hendricks. "However, as every seasoned marketer will tell you, building out such pages can be a real headache. Between dealing with lines of HTML code, integrating autoresponders and hiring outsourcers, it can often seem like there is one road block after another keeping one from launching new projects. So, when we were informed about the release of Kyle Graham's Ten Minute Pages we were eager to review the software for our online visitors. The system promises to eliminate the aforementioned roadblocks and provide users with, the first ever 'true' what-you-see-is-what-you-get marketing web page builder in existence. We wanted to see how Graham's software actually preformed so that we could determine whether it was something we should recommend to our followers."

Hendricks' Ten Minute Pages review explains that the software is accessible through an online interface so that customers do not need to download or install anything on their computers. In addition to the 'stand alone' software which publishes web pages automatically via FTP, customers who prefer WordPress can install a light weight plug in which allows them to access their Ten Minute Pages accounts from right inside their WordPress admin screens.

"Having used a variety of WordPress themes and web page editors over the years I must say I've never seen anything even remotely similar to Ten Minute Pages in terms of ease of use," says Hendricks. "Even the best WordPress themes require users to mess around with short codes and continuously click back and forth between page previews and the WordPress back office in order to get web pages to display as intended. With Ten Minute Pages it's all there in front of you and you can literally drag and drop page element exactly where you want them. The program also comes with an impressive assortment of features which we discussed at length in our review. As an online marketer himself Graham knows what marketers need, and he created a software can fulfill those needs to an extent that is unprecedented."
