Custom Binders

We may have figured out a more efficient way to record modern data with digital technology, but preserving historical documents requires skill and technique. As certain materials deteriorate over time it becomes vital to take proper care of these records before they're damaged beyond repair.

At Cogniserv, we have experienced technicians on staff to preserve and maintain your documents for the future, extending their shelf life.

We'll bring your documents back to life. No health insurance required.

Restoration

The process of protecting and repairing historical permanent records.

Cogniserv has the skilled craftsman, archival tools, resources, and experience to cost-effectively restore your county's document history.

Rebinding

Cogniserv can provide new leather or canvas binders with the county-specific gold leaf lettering.

Our binding department has all the necessary equipment in-house, eliminating the need to ship your records to binding shops across the country.

Deacidification

With the advent of safe deacidification sprays, it is now possible to halt further decaying without the need to submerge documents in a chemical bath.

By utilizing a deacidification spray, we're able to provide better results with less risk.

Encapsulation

Technology has certainly fueled a renewed interest in historical documents and information. However, preservation of these documents becomes a major concern. In order to provide the public with access to original documents while still ensuring their preservation, Cogniserv provides Mylar Encapsulation sleeves. These sleeves provide protection from oil, grease, water, dust, and still gives the public full access.

Custom Binders

Over the years, county governments have utilized binders of varying shapes, sizes, colors, materials, and quality. Cogniserv understands the unique requirements of each county and their need to maintain a certain level of consistency.

As a result, Cogniserv keeps a detailed inventory of binder components to ensure that the most unique request can be met.
