Night Photographs of Oscar Niemeyer's Brasilia Win at the 2013 International Photography Awards

Photographer Andrew Prokos is Honored by Jurors for His Night Photography in Brazil

New York, NY September 27, 2013 -- Night photographs of the Brazilian capital created by noted architectural and fine art photographer Andrew Prokos are among this year's winners at the International Photography Awards competition.

Entitled "Niemeyer's Brasilia" the series of photographs capture the surreal architecture of Oscar Niemeyer, who shaped the Brazilian capital for over 50 years. "I became fascinated by Oscar Niemeyer's buildings as works of art in themselves, and the fact that Niemeyer had unprecedented influence over the architecture of the capital during his long lifetime" says photographer Andrew Prokos. Niemeyer, who passed away in 2012 at the age of 104, was Brazil's best known architect and the designer of the United Nations buildings in New York.

"The 2013 International Photography Awards is thrilled to honor Andrew Prokos's photographic series 'Niemeyer's Brasilia' in the Night Photography category" said Linda Dzhema, the award's Director. "The work was acknowledged by a jury panel of the most recognized names in international photography, and selected to receive the award among over 10,000 participants this year. Congratulations on this outstanding achievement!" The jury for this year's competition included top international gallerists, photo editors and directors, and art collectors from organizations such as the National Geographic Society, The New York Times Magazine, Yale University Art Gallery, the Royal Photographic Society, the British Journal of Photography, Tate Britain, Taschen Books, and Phaidon Press.

About the Winner:
