MONROE, La., Nov. 12, 2013—B.J. Harrison, a multi-awarded narrator, has recently completed the audiobook version of Scotty Sanders' fantasy fiction story "Quest of the Keys." Harrison, known for "The Classic Tales Podcast" with eight million downloads, can speak 20 international languages. "Quest of the Keys' is incredibly polished," says Harrison. "It is a great pleasure and privilege to be a part of this work."

The story revolves around Decklen, a young man who narrowly escapes a life of slavery--and certain death--in the caves of the Minca Silver Mines where chained slaves labored to their death. Decklen seeks help from the only man strong enough to provide it—the elder of Leonesse. Instead of strategy or weapons, the Elder gave him a locked golden cylinder containing an ancient scroll. Decklen must first find the key to unlock the scroll. He and his friend Camberly must search for the eight hidden keys that will unlock secrets that will save the entire kingdom. The audio book allows listeners to hear the characters come alive as Decklen and Camberly go back to the mines to search for Camberly's brother who was left behind. As they work to free Camberly's brother and find the eight keys, Decklen and Camberly find themselves on an unexpected path of danger and discovery.

"Quest of the Keys" is a reader's journey towards personal growth, responsibility, integrity, honor, leadership development, and clear purpose. The book was used in the Ouachita Parish middle schools as part of the pilot English language arts curriculum. The book has teacher resources available to give instructors in-depth background material relating to vocabulary, comprehension, written expressions, and response. The curriculum is currently being used in a growing number of school systems across the country, including in home schools. The curriculum is praised for helping students deal with real issues, such as bullying and critical thinking.
