

2014 Bayer CropScience Young Farmer Sustainability Award

Deadline: January 17, 2014

The Bayer CropScience Young Farmer Sustainability Award recognizes young agricultural producers, located within the continental United States, who demonstrate excellence in business and environmental sustainability. Entrants are judged by a panel of agriculture professionals on entrepreneurial initiative and new approaches to farming (50%), environmental and other on-farm sustainability efforts (30%), and economic stability and sustainability (20%). Any farmer or rancher age 40 and under who receives at least half of his or her income from farming and farm-related ventures may apply.

To apply, complete the entry form and essay questions and send a letter of reference from an accountant, banker, input dealer/representative or agribusiness leader. Winners agree to be recognized in articles potential print, broadcast and online media. Any financial information remains confidential unless entrants agree to its release.

For information about this award or event, see www.bayercropscience.us/our-commitment/sustainability-award.
