

South Beach Skincare, which contains ingredients that have been proven to be effective by most of the Ivy League universities' medical research centers, has caught attention of HealthAvenger.com's Susan Stevenson, prompting an investigative review.

"Our LifeCell review shows that its revolutionary light technology reflects and gets rid of the shadows that cause the human eye to be able to distinguish a wrinkle," reports Stevenson. "All the ingredients in it are totally harmless, unlike dangerous collagen and Botox injections, and other invasive treatments such as chemical skin peels. The simple application of LifeCell and its light boosting effect works until you wash your face. After that, you can simply just reapply it whenever you wish."

LifeCell contains Dithiolane-3-Pentanoic Acid (D3PA), an antioxidant and anti-inflammatory agent, Acetyl Hexapeptide-3 that prevents damage to the facial muscles or skin, Retinol (Vitamin A), a wrinkle-fighting ingredient, super antioxidant Ubiquinol, firmness activator Deanol, and Ascorbyl Palmitate that protects the skin from ultraviolet A and B, promotes collagen synthesis, and lightens hyperpigmentation. "By using powerful anti-aging and anti-wrinkle ingredients simultaneously, LifeCell not only gives you a youthful effect immediately, but also improves the condition of your skin and its appearance in the long term," says Stevenson. "This incredible potion begins to work and change your appearance just like harmful and sometimes painful Botox injections and other invasive chemical treatments do, but without the inherent risks involved."

"Within seconds of application, LifeCell works on all those aging skin conditions that we can't fail to experience as we grow older. From young to old and male to female, it offers all of us the chance to not only improve what we look like right now, but also to ensure that we continue to look our best as the years roll by. This is possibly one of the most unique anti-aging products to have blasted onto the market ever."
