

Loot Scotland has announced that it is to open a new telesales centre in Glasgow City Centre at the start of 2014 and expand into Scotland.

The Classified Newspaper publisher has acquired offices in Wellington Street, which will see the newly recruited team focussed on promoting the company's online and print services. These include a new website www.scottishloot.com and a newspaper called "Scottish Loot" which is being launched in February 2014, as well as the established titles, such as Loot, Bargain Pages, Free Ad Mart, Motor Car Pages and the Irish Post.

Katrina Smith, Sales Director, at Loot Scotland "As the face of our company, our sales teams pride themselves on delivering a consistently excellent customer experience and we are delighted to be putting down roots in Glasgow to help us build relationships with new customers."

She continued: "This is an exciting time to be joining Loot Scotland as we continue to grow our print and online products for private buyers and sellers as well trade customers. There is still a strong market for print products as well a growing online market which we serve."

The new website www.scottishloot.com and "Scottish Loot" newspaper product we give the people of Scotland the opportunity to place classified adverts online and in print, to buy and sell just about anything, from washing machines to cars. The print version will hit the shelves on Tuesday's and Friday's and the online version is available 24 hours a day
