

La Dentellière is a ~~little~~ new digital publishing house that was founded in France in 2014. Because we admire both technology and the artistic process, we make books specifically for the tablet market. Our endeavor has three characteristics that set it apart:

1) a team of individuals works on our projects, and not only in the digital realm. Our artisanal production process includes artists, authors, designers, composers, videographers, musicians and other creatives. Our artists are given a share of the profits equal to that of the publishing house—we are all in it together.

2) we make books specifically for the tablet market that could not exist on paper.

3) we appreciate technology as much as we love the act of creating something beautiful in the real world and merging low tech with high tech.

Unique and inspired books with enduring appeal result from this collaboration. Designed by artists, they offer a sensory-satisfying multimedia tablet experience.

We publish children's books and are also preparing to release collections in the "Do-It-Yourself" and "Literature" segments of the market. Here as well, the artisan's perspective will be highlighted and aesthetics will be of the utmost importance.

The books we create for electronic devices are like finely worked lace, hence our name, which means "lace maker" in French. Our books will amaze and engage readers worldwide.
