WRITING LIKE A BOSS. . .

This time last year, we made the decision to quit corporate and take indie, authentic and no-holds-barred writing to the next level. Writing on the side had been happening for years, but we figured it was time to see if we had the chops to make it happen. Like typical business thinkers, we researched the publishing industry, drafted a plan and began the journey.

A year later, we've given birth to our first published book, with three more in the pipeline, and two additional works in draft phase. And we've only just begun. Expect great things, because we have great passion, insane drive, and one hell of a work ethic. We also have a great team because let it be clear, it takes a village to publish. A village.
