JOBING.COM SUPPORTS NEW ARENA NAMING RIGHTS PARTNER

Jobing.com supports Gila River Casinos on new naming rights proposal for Jobing.com Arena

SCOTTSDALE (August 13, 2014) - Jobing.com shares excitement for the Arizona Coyotes, the City of Glendale, and Gila River Casinos, as the Arizona Coyotes announced today a plan to rename the Jobing.com Arena to the "Gila River Arena," pending Glendale City Council approval, after an 8 year naming rights partnership, which began in 2006.

Amidst the transition with the team, which began in 2009, Jobing.com has been committed to helping the Coyotes remain in Glendale. The company was excited that IceArizona acquired the team in 2013 to remove the uncertainty surrounding the Coyotes.

"With the change in ownership, we understood that a new long-term naming rights partner was a priority for the organization. We wish the Arizona Coyotes, the Coyotes employees, Gila River Casinos, and the City of Glendale much success with the Arena and in bringing a Stanley Cup to Arizona," said Aaron Matos, Founder & CEO of Jobing.com.

Throughout the course of the partnership, Jobing.com has continued to evolve and in 2012 the company launched an award-winning software division under the Recruiting.com name. The company remains committed to Arizona and is currently hiring aggressively at its corporate headquarters at Skysong in Scottsdale for software engineers and software sales.

"Gila River has been a long-standing client and partner of Jobing.com for more than a decade. We truly enjoy working together and utilizing our recruiting technology to help Gila River attract quality talent to help grow their business. We couldn't think of a better local organization to transition the Arena naming rights," said Matos.

"In 2006, our goal was to expand the Jobing.com brand in Arizona as the premier destination to connect Arizona employers and job seekers," said Matos. "We thank Anthony LeBlanc, and the entire Arizona Coyotes organization, and we are appreciative of our association with the players and the employees of the Arizona Coyotes & Jobing.com Arena."
