

World Education.net and Augusoft Partner to Expand Online Class Offerings for Institutions

Featuring self-paced online courses with seamless integration between platforms.

Minneapolis, Minn. – October 2, 2014 – Augusoft® announced an agreement with World Education, LLC to offer World Education.net's online classes through Lumens®, a cloud-based enrollment management system designed for the unique needs of continuing education and workforce development programs. Through this agreement, Augusoft clients can now cross-market and build unique online certificate programs using World Education's online course catalog while offering learners a single sign-on, self-registering experience.

"The services Augusoft extends to their clients, really enriches the learning experience and potential for customers to increase their revenue," stated Candice Markham, President of World Education.net. "This agreement gives us the opportunity to reach more customers with an organization like Augusoft who has the same core mission to improve learning for all."

Founder Stephen Gatlin, a pioneer in the industry since 1993, is committed to aggregating and developing the most in-demand career training content available that empowers individuals and advances careers. The World Education.net staff works closely with a shared altruistic vision and people-centric values that include teamwork, fun and empowerment. Gatlin worked on establishing the international market and most recently turned focus back to the US to bring classes across the country creating quality professional education and military spouse programs.

"We work hard to make sure we bring quality partners into the Lumens community," stated Beth Moorhead, Director of Business Development for Augusoft. "World Education.net's experience and reputation in the marketplace speak to their dedication to making a change in the learners they reach."

World Education.net currently has almost 200 online certification courses and over 500 total online classes in workforce development units. World Education also targets to help military spouses with career development programs and grants.
