Each week receive detailed time sheets per entry, a report of the work accomplished for the week, and the goals for the coming week. Hirers get 5 days to review reports and lodge any queries/holding payment. After that, payment is made automatically without hirers needing to do anything

Keeping track

Set period for reports incl. end-of-year financials

Lodge query/block payment per time entry

Besides time entry, freelancers submit a full weekly report

The screenshot displays a 'TRACKING' web interface. At the top, there is a 'TERMS' section for 'Dev [Name] | SEM campaign management'. It includes a profile picture, a 'Pre-authorisation for Billing' section with details like 'Original Amount: USD2,000.00' and 'Amount still available: USD90,000.00', and a 'Project Details' section with 'Start date: 19/03/2014', 'Estimated end date', 'Hourly rate: USD200.00', 'Max weekly billing: USD6200.00', and 'Max weekly hours: 10'. There are 'View PayPal' and 'Change Terms' buttons.

Below this is the 'FREELANCER ACTIVITY' section, featuring a 'Pay Bonus/Extra' button and a table with columns for 'Period', 'Actual hours', 'Actual $', 'Limit hours', and 'Limit $'. The table shows weekly data for 2014, with a total of 12.87 hours and 321.75 dollars. A 'Details for selected period' section provides summary statistics: 'Total hours worked: 12.87 hours and 321.75 dollars' and 'Average hours worked/weekend: 0.75'.

At the bottom, the 'TIMESHEET SUBMITTED' section shows a table with columns for 'Project Name', 'Freelancer', 'Submitted Date', 'Status', 'Date', and 'Time'. A red 'Lodge query for time' button is visible. Red dotted arrows point from the text on the left to the 'Lodge query for time' button and the 'Date' column in the 'TIMESHEET SUBMITTED' table.
