

Facts and Links File for the Press Release:
Internet of Things Maker, David Nghiem, Wins the TechCrunch Disrupt NYC 2015 Hackathon

Video of the TechCrunch Disrupt NYC 2015 Hackathon Presentation:

http://techcrunch.com/video/stove-top-sensor-for-paranoid-stubborn-older-parents/518803675/?utm_campaign=naytev&utm_content=55469fc5e4b048002a3c4461&fb_ref=Default

Video of the Award at TechCrunch, at minute 6:49, when Twilio comes up to announce the prize winner:

<http://techcrunch.com/video/hackathon-sponsor-winners/518803753/>

Blog articles about the win:

The Twilio prize went to Stove Top Sensor for Paranoid, Stubborn Older Parents which adds cellphone and web connectivity to the stove, letting you check if you remembered to turn off the burns.

<http://hackaday.com/2015/05/03/weekend-proves-hardware-wins-hackathons/>

Tucked away in one small corner of the room was the Hackaday crew, giving out dev boards, components, and advice to the few dozen hardware hackers at Disrupt. [David], one of these Hackaday enthusiasts won the Twilio Sponsorship Prize at Disrupt, and now it's a Hackaday Prize entry.

<http://hackaday.com/2015/05/26/hackaday-prize-entry-telling-dad-the-stove-is-off/>

Texting to Victory at TechCrunch Disrupt

<http://blog.temboo.com/post/118724400916/texting-to-victory-at-techcrunch-disrupt>

A full video presentation of the winning IOT device part 1, "Send a Text With Fire"
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=vqUpmdOxk5s>

And the Technical Explanation behind the device, "Send a Text With Fire, pt. 2"
<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=pPHEoEuO0as>

And the main project blog page for the device:
<https://hackaday.io/project/4688-an-iot-device-that-tells-dad-the-stove-is-off>