GREENE, TWEED AND EVONIK INDUSTRIES BRING HIGH-PERFORMANCE TECHNOLOGY TO PARIS AIR SHOW

Kulpsville (June 2015) – Greene, Tweed has announced that one of its newest engineering thermoplastics, Arlon® 3000 XT, will be showcased at this year's Paris Air Show, which runs from 15-21 June.

Arlon 3000 XT was developed in partnership with Evonik Industries and delivers enhanced performance in extreme high-temperature environments such as fire seals.

The technology is based on Evonik's VESTAKEEP® PEEK polymer platform, which is particularly suitable for applications that must meet extremely high mechanical, thermal and chemical requirements.

As a result of the collaborative partnership between Greene, Tweed and Evonik, a new industry standard for thermoplastics performance has been set. Material issues that can result from demanding, high-temperature aerospace applications can be minimized through the use of Arlon 3000 XT, which features enhanced performance and superior mechanical property retention at 350°F (177°C) to 600°F (316°C).

Greene, Tweed continues to test and expand this advanced technology to new Aerospace applications.
