

On Newsstands Now: ON Magazine, Centered on Personal and Professional Development

The quarterly digital publication offers tips for IT professionals as well as other business-line-unit leaders.

Warwick, R.I.—June 2, 2015— Atrion has made a name for itself in the IT services space over the past few decades as an elite managed service provider — thanks, in large part, to its cosourcing model. And, most recently, the company has taken a considerable step forward on its thought leadership journey as well.

Today, Atrion unveils its inaugural issue of ON magazine, a quarterly digital publication offering professional and personal development tips for IT professionals as well as other business-line-unit leaders.

“This magazine was designed 100 percent with the reader in mind,” Atrion CEO Tim Hebert said. “It will focus on the challenges professionals face on the IT battleground, the technological advances and required leadership skills that will transform your business, and the potential for incredible outcomes.”

He added, “This magazine also gives us the chance to spotlight the amazing advancements being made by some of our clients as well as the rock-star work being done right here within the Atrion walls.”

For the inaugural issue of ON, Atrion executives chose to pull back the curtain on the importance of the 2014 Merriam-Webster word of the year “culture. The cover story, titled “Your New Era of Certainty Starts with a Strong, Healthy Corporate Culture,” reveals why today’s companies are laser-focused on the rewards of creating a healthy corporate culture. The article details the definition of corporate culture, how companies can find their unique cultures, and why finding this culture is imperative for businesses.

The June issue also includes a feature story on how to establish confidence around using Lync, FlexPod and SharePoint technologies; a Q&A with one of Atrion’s innovation leaders, Kevin McCarron; a profile piece on Wesleyan University, an Atrion client; and a stat break about the IT talent deficit.
