

Gintzler Graphics' increase in productivity due to new SRIs from A B Graphic International

Gintzler Graphics and their customers are already benefiting from two new A B Graphic SRI Inspection machines. With superior tension control and the FleyeVision technology, Gintzler can now inspect products with the use of a vision system, which previously was done visually by the operator with the machines replaced by the SRIs.

The two Inspection Slitter Rewinders, manufactured at A B Graphic International's German facility, were installed in April at Gintzler's Buffalo location which immediately realized an increase in productivity and quality.

"Choosing the SRIs from A B Graphic International was an easy decision", says Robert Strach, VP of Manufacturing for Gintzler Graphics. "The ease of operation and the reputation of A B Graphic International as the market leader in finishing and inspection equipment enabled us to commit immediately to two machines, and we have not been disappointed. Operators like having a choice of running position; sitting or standing, which in addition to the use of FleyeVision, has resulted in reducing fatigue." The SRI was specifically designed for high speed slitter inspection applications and includes a 100% print face inspection camera imbedded into the main machine control system. The FleyeVision system and SRI rewinder are manufactured at the same location, offering seamless integration and resulting in waste reduction.
