Imagine music that combines the rawness and unpredictability of the rock world with the glossiness and catchy hooks of the pop world. Singer/songwriter Jacyn Tremblay and guitarist/singer/songwriter Peter Tentindo have come together from their respective sonic realms to create a truly unique and thought-provoking new musical experience called the Venus Mars Project.

Influenced by the classic rock edge and a modern pop sensibility, Jacyn and Peter are embarking on a journey that is sure to excite the ears and souls of their listeners.

Jacyn and Peter, both natives of Danvers, MA, first met when they were cast together in an original rock horror musical, “Scary Mary and the Audio Corsette”, for Salem’s dynamic Halloween season of Haunted Happenings. Their serendipitous connection sparked a musical relationship, combined with the help of a select few collaborators, who are experts in their respective fields of business, marketing, and media production, Venus Mars Project was launched.

“ We believe music is a powerful, universal language that has the ability to reach people all over the world. The songs we write echo the positivity we try to infuse in all of our work. Using music as our creative outlet and reflection of our personal lives, much of our subject matter comes from shared experiences we feel are relatable to everyone.

Venus Mars Project has worked with many prominent producers and engineers for their original songs. #LaLaLaLove was produced by renowned producer/songwriter Anthony Resta, who has worked with legendary artists such as Elton John, Duran Duran, and Collective Soul. Not Gonna Stop Me Now was mixed by producer/engineer Bob St. John, whose credits include Extreme and Dokken.

Their debut singles, Hands of Time and Jump In, produced by Mixed Emotions Studios, both have accompanying music videos directed by video production extraordinaire, Ben Consoli, owner of BC Media Production, who has directed television commercials for national brands like Nike, Reebok, Pillsbury, and Verizon.
