Introducing SSAMCAST's Online Student Mentor Programs: College Talk: Season 1

Online Programs Offer Tips to Succeed with College Application and High School Achievement

SAN JOSE, CA— (July 24, 2015) Parents and students trying to decide which college program or subject to study are faced with an overwhelming task. The U.S. Department of Education in their 2013 Digest of Education Statistics states that there are 2,968 4-year colleges in the United States. Having to choose from such a large number of colleges and universities can be problematic for high school students and their parents, who can easily become confused about which four year college will best suit their needs.

Teracle's SSAMCAST is a knowledge sharing e-learning platform, developed by two Berkeley students Carla Choi and Alexander Matos. The online programs just released "College Talk: Season 1" share stories from current college students to help high school students and their parents choose a college program. <http://ssamcast.com/course/102>

There are 22 episodes, each interviewing 12 college students at 9 colleges that include: UC Berkeley, Stanford, Cal Tech, UCLA, USC, University of Pacific, Claremont McKenna College, Pomona College and Scripps College.

In every episode a student shares his/her college life and college program to help the viewers' gain a better understanding of each school's program. In addition, they provide tips and advice for a successful high school experience and university application process from their real world experiences as well as studying for the SAT/ACT/AP.

According to College Talk creators, Choi and Matos have so far traveled to the west coast to meet and interview students. Next they will be traveling to the east coast. Students and parents are encouraged to watch the episodes for helpful information about college life, programs and how to succeed with the college application process. Visit: www.ssamcast.com
