

Trapp Technology Donates WNBA Tickets to Camp Swift Volunteer Support Staff

Arizona IT solutions company gives game day tickets to volunteer staff of non-profit youth mentorship foundation

Scottsdale, Arizona – August 13, 2015 – Scottsdale-based Trapp Technology, a provider of IT, Internet, Voice, and cloud hosting solutions, has donated over a dozen corporate suite tickets to the volunteer support staff of Camp Swift – a non-profit organization focused on social and emotional development of inner city youth through unique, year round mentorship programs.

Trapp Technology's US Airways Center suite tickets to the Phoenix Mercury vs. Minnesota Lynx WNBA game on August 7, 2015 were bestowed as a small token of appreciation to the dedicated members of Camp Swift's summer volunteer staff – a group of adults who contributed over 2,500 hours to the signature Overnight Camp. These essential volunteers prepare daily nutritious meals for over 200 campers and counselors while facilitating team-building activities designed to encourage positive health, physical, and behavioral choices.

“Camp Swift is so grateful to Trapp Technology for giving us the opportunity to show our volunteers how much we appreciate their hard work and commitment to the our organization's mission,” says Kaylie Marsh, Executive Director at Camp Swift. “Though our volunteers do not expect these types of rewards for their efforts, it enabled us to remind them of their significant impact to our success as an organization.”

“Providing event tickets to Camp Swift is part of our ongoing mission to give back to the Phoenix youth and community,” says Nicole Wheeler, Event Coordinator at Trapp Technology. “We hope our efforts reflect our support for organizations such as Camp Swift who provide life-changing experiences and teen leadership opportunities to those in need.”

About Camp Swift

Founded in 1980, Camp Swift provides overnight camps, after school, and weekend programs that promote positive mentor relationships between economically disadvantaged youth and college-bound teens. At the signature Camp Swift overnight camp, they offer nutritious meals, physical activity and, most importantly, a safe environment in which to learn and play, away from neighborhoods often characterized by violence. Campers are referred from homeless shelters, Boys and Girls Clubs, and Title 1 school districts. Select high school and college volunteers lead activities and act as role models for making positive choices in health, physical activity and behavior.
