Experience the Adirondack Coast's Signature Colors this Fall
*Great Walks and Day Hikes Lead to Breathtaking Adirondack Views

Plattsburgh, NY– 8/27/2015 – Autumn on the Adirondack Coast is characterized by sun-baked days and cool, crisp nights. Flaming reds, oranges and gold's – the Adirondack Coast's signature colors of fall – help make this, what is often described as, the most beautiful time of year. Follow the progression of color change as it slowly moves down in elevation, beginning in mid-September in the Adirondack High Peak region through mid-to-late October along Lake Champlain.

There is no better time to explore the Adirondack Coast on foot than in the fall. More than 2,000 miles of hiking trails wind through the Adirondacks offering a glimpse into a world pristine and untouched – just as it was hundreds of years ago. In autumn, the Adirondack fall foliage provides a spectacular backdrop for any hiking experience. Whether it's reaching the fire tower on Lyon Mountain, backpacking through the woods or just strolling along Plattsburgh's Heritage Trail, the Adirondack Coast offers a wide variety of hiking opportunities all with breathtaking views.
