"Sustaining Growth amidst an Intensely Competitive Global LPG Market"

Major energy event of the year was the collapse of the crude oil price and its domino effect on NGL and of course LPG prices - according to Poten & Partners. Brent crude oil prices hit between $50 and $65 per barrel resulting in LPG product prices being at a 7-10 year low whilst freight rates are hitting historical high levels throughout the year. As a result, the trading arbitrage has been closed for lengthy periods creating challenging dynamics for the LPG market as a whole.

Key developments of the international LPG markets this year are:

- Further expansion of the US export terminal capacity following the additions and export built-up from Enterprise and Targa in Houston and Sunoco in Marcus Hook and Nederland terminals with further additions from Enterprise and Oxy expected to follow suit by the end of the year.

- Continuous seaborne LPG export growth which is forecasted to increase by 4 to 5 mm t in 2015. The bulk of this export increase is estimated to come from the US.
- Significant demand growth in China (petrochemical and retail demand) and India (retail demand), which together are expected to import the lion's share of the incremental LPG seaborne export growth to balance the market for 2015.
- Continuous strength of the European demand for propane as a steam cracking feedstock.
- Prolonged high freight rates, which averaged above the threshold of $100/t from January and July 2015.
- Undergoing discussions about the lifting of the Iranian sanctions, which if they are confirmed will progressively add significant volumes to the LPG export market.
- OPEC's decision to continue producing crude oil at the same level is having an effect on the uninterrupted flow of LPG volumes

These developments raise several questions for discussion at CMT's 10th LPGtrade Summit:

- Is all this terminal capacity needed?
- How the crude oil price can affect the global NGL and hence LPG production and exports in the short to medium term?
- Will the VLGC freight market continue to be strong in 2016 or the large orderbook and forthcoming Panama Canal opening will have a significant effect on freight rates?
- Has Asia the capability to continue to absorb all the LPG production growth out of the US?
- What is the potential for further LPG petrochemical consumption of LPG as a feedstock in Asia?
- How will US Gulf prices compare with Asian and European market prices in the future and how the trade arbitrage will be affected by freight rates and crude oil price swings?

More than 10 hours of networking opportunities at CMT's 10th LPGtrade Summit to meet and renew business ties and forge new business relationships
