(Washington, D.C.) The Group of Thirty today released the paper, Growth, Stability, and Prosperity in Latin America. The paper is the newest addition to their Occasional Paper series.

The paper includes three perspectives from Alexandre Tombini, Governor of the Banco Central do Brasil, Rodrigo Vergara, Governor of the Banco Central de Chile, and Julio Velarde, Governor of the Banco Central de Reservas del Perú. The authors discuss the economic outlook in their respective countries and in the region.

The authors discuss the many challenges and opportunities facing Latin American countries in the dynamic global economy. They stress the need for structural reforms to be taken by these countries in order to resume growth in the region and discuss the overall economic prospects in Brazil, Chile, and Peru.

Jean-Claude Trichet, Chairman of the Group of Thirty, welcomed the paper. “This piece on Latin America is a compelling and thought-provoking narrative on the many economic issues facing these particular countries. We are pleased to add these reflections to our Occasional Paper series.”
