

The Chartis Group names Courtney Morris as iVantage Health Analytics President

Chicago, IL, June 28, 2016 – The Chartis Group (Chartis) announced today that Courtney Morris will join their leadership team as the President of iVantage Health Analytics (iVantage). Acquired by Chartis late last year, iVantage provides hospitals and healthcare systems with performance management analytic tools for benchmarking, strategic planning and payment optimization. Mr. Morris will lead strategy, product development and continued investments in people and overall innovation. Together, iVantage and Chartis will continue to advance the power of analytics in the healthcare industry - coupling unrivaled thought leadership, transformative capabilities and leading analytic decision support tools to healthcare providers.

Mr. Morris has a proven background in driving growth and performance improvement through the use of digital technologies and informatics. He has deep expertise in healthcare data, methods and analytics, and a strong desire to help clients identify meaningful and actionable insights to address pressing industry issues. Mr. Morris spent over a decade in the health information space with Thomson Reuters' Healthcare business, serving in a number of roles including Chief Strategy Officer and SVP of Global Marketing Strategy and Services. When this business transitioned to Truven Health Analytics, Mr. Morris joined Truven's team as SVP of Product Development. Previous experiences also include serving as the EVP of Solutions at Decision Resources; strategic consulting at McKinsey & Company where he focused on mobile technology models, international expansion and operational efficiency; and The Parthenon Group where he was a Principal and strategic advisor.

"Courtney's track record of being at the forefront of digital and analytic solutions, his long-standing dedication to the healthcare industry and his success driving transformative change makes him the ideal leader for iVantage," says Ken Graboys, Co-Founder and Chief Executive Officer at Chartis. He adds, "iVantage has one of the best analytics platforms in the industry and is working with hundreds of healthcare providers to identify areas of growth, operational efficiencies and performance improvement. Under Courtney's leadership, I am excited to see what comes next."

"It is such an exciting time to be in healthcare where the current convergence of data, technology and expertise has so much promise to improve clinical, operational and financial outcomes. The opportunity to further iVantage's proven solutions to meaningfully impact providers' healthcare performance, supported by the vast expertise of the Chartis Group, is truly exciting and I am thrilled to be joining the team," says Courtney Morris.

Mr. Morris will join a strong team of senior leaders at iVantage consisting of the following:
Linda Albery, Senior Vice President of Advisory Solutions
Clayton Donahue, Senior Vice President of Engineering
John Legelis, Chief Technology Officer
Araby Thornewill, Executive Vice President
Michael Topchik, Senior Vice President of Rural
John Whittlesey, Vice President of Client Services

Mr. Morris holds a Master of Business Administration and a Bachelor of Arts in finance from the University of Utah. He serves on the board of Universal Patient Key, volunteers with Angel Flight NE and will be based in the Boston area.
