FCPWORKS Releases Exclusive Workflow Videos Featuring Apple's Final Cut Pro X

San Francisco, CA, December 14th, 2016 - FCPWORKS released two new workflow videos presenting the features of Apple's latest release of its Final Cut Pro X post-production software. The videos provide unprecedented access to Apple personnel demonstrating new and powerful features of the application.

The videos were produced in partnership with Michael Horton, founder of the Los Angeles Creative Pro User Group and were captured during the group's most recent meeting in November. The videos showcase Final Cut Pro X being used in the production of a video profile of Japanese botanical artist, Azuma Makoto.

"We've been helping customers produce content with Final Cut Pro X since its inception back in 2011 and these videos illustrate the software's next-generation power and ease of use at its best," said Noah Kadner, FCPWORKS' Marketing Director. "We couldn't be more proud to showcase not only the software itself but also some of the behind the scenes stars from Apple itself demonstrating the software's awesome capabilities and revealing great tips and tricks."
