

Trustoria Professional Directory Expands to Include Gig Economy Employee Profiles

The Only Directory to Include Uber and Lyft Drivers, Handymen and Cleaners from Handy and TaskRabbit, and Freelancers from Upwork and Fiverr

Trustoria, the national professional directory, today announced that it has added professional profiles for many of the thousands of people found on popular freelance and “Gig economy” services. The new profiles allow consumers to know the professional history of these freelancers before accepting the service. Trustoria is the only public professional directory to include profiles of the people employed by these new online services.

While the background check process of companies like Uber, Lyft, Handy and others is continuously improving, the information is never made available to consumers who engage with their employees. The people employed by these services can range from temporary workers on a second job, such as drivers and cleaners, to full-time professionals with many years’ experience in their field, including plumbers, accountants and software developers. Trustoria profiles give the consumer a better sense of who they are working with – who is driving them, cleaning their house or solving a business need.

There are many online directories dedicated to popular professions including the legal, medical, home repair fields and more. However, Trustoria.com offers more profiles on a wider range of service provider types than any other public directory.

The new Trustoria profiles cover the professional history of these gig-economy workers and freelancers including their current company, past employers, stated professions and work experiences. The profiles also include education history such as the schools they attended along with professional certifications and degrees achieved. In most cases, the current address and mobile phone number is also available in a related premium contact information report.
