

Radaris Helps More Than Five Million People Find Friends and Family Each Month

The Premier Public Records Aggregator Claims More Repeat Customers than Any Other People Search Engine

Radaris, the public records search engine, helps more than five million people find old friends, military buddies and lost family members every month. These people first look for records that help them verify the identity, then need any associated contact information to help them reconnect with the person. More people return to Radaris.com for the unique content design that gives users free information assembled into profiles with both online records and social media mentions.

Everyone has lost contact with friends and distant family relations at some point. Whether they were childhood playmates, college roommates, recent co-workers, men and women that served in the military together or distant family relations. Eventually the desire to see where they have been and what they have been doing comes to all of us. In fact, Google Trends shows that searches related to finding information about people were the second most popular subject following only global news.

Radaris.com is able to help more people find their old friends and family than other people search engines because of our commitment to making public records freely available to everyone. The free profiles on every person in the country combine the most useful facts from many pages of information that could be found in a general search engine query and many details that are not available in other search engines. This depth of information is the value that causes more people to be repeat customers of our service than any Radaris competitors.

Details of the free profiles can include; first and last name, age and date of birth, place of birth, schools attended and years in attendance, known employers and years of employment, military service information such as dates of service, recent residence address, names of friend's parents, siblings, and other close family relations and frequently the names of other people who also knew the friend.

These recent customer reviews and quotes reveal the specific benefits that people find in both the free profiles and premium contact reports and detailed background checks.

"Thank you for helping me find a long lost relative. We just had our first visit and it was remarkable. Thanks for keeping some services free so that I could have this moment."

James W., Michigan

"Used this service to locate a childhood friend. The report was affordable and full of information. I got his cell phone number and email with no hassle. Just what I was looking for. Thank you."

Jack M., Rhode Island

"My mandate was to contact alumni of a high school - graduation dates from 1938 until 2013! I found over 100 addresses!"

This is the second time I have used Radaris for a research project. As the last time, the information was extremely helpful. The previous address feature enabled me to locate people whose mail had been returned because they moved."

Elizabeth G., New York

Interested people can begin their research on Radaris.com today to join the millions of other satisfied users.

About Radaris

Radaris (<https://radaris.com/>) is a public records search engine. Radaris.com provides free public profiles along with premium background checks, contact information reports and other information tools.

Contact: Radaris America, Inc.

Press Relations

press@radaris.com

617-658-1463

© 2017 Radaris America, Inc. All rights reserved. All other trademarks are the property of their respective owners.