Adolfson & Peterson Construction Tops Out Inova II Office Building

Centennial, Colo. (May, 25 2017) – Signifying the construction milestone of being approximately halfway through construction, the Inova II Office building celebrated its topping out. The structure will be southeast Denver’s newest innovative suburban class-A office building, located just off I-25 on East Dry Creek Road. Construction team members, along with the design team and other project stakeholders, celebrated the event with a BBQ and the tradition of placing the final steel beam onto the top of the building.

Inova II was designed by Powers Brown Architecture and developed by United Properties. Inova, short for innovate, reflects the competitive advantages in providing a high value, cost effective, smart, sustainable and efficient new office campus.

Part of a 5-building master-planned development, the new 4-story, 233,000-sf office building will be built using a unique tilt-up panel method. The class-A spec office building is an L-shaped structure with a partially below grade parking structure. It features large, efficient floor plates, expansive windows and a roof-top patio. The space is expected to provide workspace for 574 employees throughout the first and second floor.

“These developments will be transforming the standards of how our industry builds working environments to be more sustainable and cost-effective”, said Tom Horsting, Regional Vice President of Adolfson & Peterson Construction. “It is wonderful to be a part of this team.”

AP was awarded the project from the success of building the Inova I project. Inova II is pursuing LEED Silver Certification and will be completed in December 2017.
