

About Ryan Klonek, founder, Zulli Family Club

“As I make my way through this journey I strive to have an impact on others; for children, adults and educators.” - Ryan Klonek

Ryan Klonek, started his work in education in 2004 when he built After School to Achieve. Over the course of 12 years, the company grew with the community, starting with a handful of staff and expanding further. It started with a few fitness-focused classes and expanded to a curriculum of 50+ types of enrichment courses, today. The program has existed in over 10 districts in the greater Houston area and continues to provide opportunities for underprivileged schools and work opportunities to our Houston area college students. After School To Achieve has a goal: Show students they can change the world starting with themselves.

He decided to get involved with the building blocks of education to create an opportunity and make a difference in today’s society. He says, “As I make my way through this journey I strive to have an impact on others; for children, adults and educators. Finding a need and providing a service that gives others the chance to improve themselves through the implementation of new methods of learning all while providing the educators with a better experience.”

He founded Zulli Method in 2014, and has since gone on to form his new venture, Zulli Family Club, launching this summer. Klonek is an avid supporter of local businesses and the local communities and charities. Plans are in the works for a future facility where underprivileged students can one day come for additional assistance in their education and work alongside with charities to provide opportunities for those in need. Always humble, Klonek concludes, “Throughout my journey I’ve always aspired to be a well rounded business man who is respected by the community and my peers.”

Ryan is a native of Houston, Texas and a graduate of Alief Hasting High School.