

“Notch, the Rescued Dolphin”

BIO ILLUSTRATOR

Jackie Mask is an illustrator and fine artist located in Baltimore, Maryland. With deep roots in Houston, Texas, she enjoys the imagery (and food) that comes from its rich and diverse history. She has always had a passion for natural science and wildlife conservation, and most of her work is centered around the natural world. She has a very serious love of birds, whales, horses, and almost everything in-between. Jackie typically works traditionally, but has begun playing with mixing digital and traditional techniques.

Aside from private commission work, Jackie has worked for institutions such as, the Smithsonian Institution as an illustrator for the Division of Birds, and non-profits like Hawaii Ocean Watch, producing content for their social media presence and illustrating a children's book about marine life conservation.
