

The Jessie Golden series & Quantum Physics

In the Jessie Golden 21st Century Earth Series, Dutch journalist Jessie Golden is trying to unravel her life destiny and her journey into the unknown. The story is closely related to today's reality and the author's fantasy of what could happen if we let things run their own course. Quest to the Unknown (part one) was recently published and introduces the main characters of the series. Step by step the author elaborates more on (sensitive) topics, which she cleverly entwined in the fiction story.

Research into the topic of Munay-Ki, resulted in a more thorough study on the working of Quantum Physics. When writing the second part in the Jessie Golden series, Darkness & Light, available in 2018, Dutch author Annelies George reflected on something she had written based on her findings. The heroine, Jessie Golden, is reading a speech of a psychic called Nancy. The latter was in trance at the time. In the last part of the speech, the psychic mentions the following:

What the world looks like today is the aggregation of combined intellectual capacity, resulting in a flow of good and bad energy, two needed extremes normally creating a balance in which we can learn and grow.

Transformation will only take place when one individual changes his or her way of life. This affects somebody else, who in turn influences yet another one, snowballing in a positive or negative direction.

Unfortunately the ball is rolling in the wrong way, with us getting caught up in a reality of jealousy, greed, power, war, hatred, violence and sorrow. Darkness is threatening to color our daily lives.

Are we still able to turn this destructive trend around before the Earth decides to take its own measures to restore balance in an act of purification of the planet?

Those are fine words, Jessie thought, putting the notes aside for a second. A dramatic change would be required to turn this trend around. Basically she very well understood the message Nancy was trying to convey.

You're affected by the actions and words of others, acting accordingly just like the quantum physics principle of the interdependency of connecting parts.

Science did confirm particles have a lasting effect on each other, even though these particles were physically no longer together after the initial encounter. Once a critical mass had been achieved, this eventually would snowball--exactly what Nancy had reflected in her speech. As a consequence terrorist groups were sprouting up over the past decades, with all that implied.

We've already seen this in the past with Hitler, a single male with a vision, able to influence an entire nation, pouring death and destruction in various countries.

Historically the snowballing Nancy related to seemed to be working out just fine in the case of evil practices. Even today a constant increase in recruitment of groups sowing terror and death was clearly noticeable.

How can that be? she thought. Does the human brain convert negative influences more rapidly in thoughts and actions than positive?

Let's turn the Hitler story around, she thought, with someone stepping up, proclaiming completely the opposite--a single male or female with a vision about unconditional love, sharing and forgiveness. Would this person be able to influence an entire nation with this vision, leading to love and peace in the world?

It really made her think.

Would that work with all those automatic machine guns, poison gas and bombs? It was hard to believe. Or was she mistaken?

She picked up the paper again, wondering what kind of spin Nancy would put to it.

The answer is a definite “yes” if today one person on this planet dares to take a critical look at himself, willing to make a change. Exactly how hard would it be to wonder who you are, what you're doing here, why you live the life as it's now developing and what change you can make to be a better person?

It's not half as complicated as it looks. Open your eyes, your nose, your mouth and your ears. See what appears to be invisible so far, smell the trail to the path leading to peace, speak the language coming from your heart and listen and answer the call for love. Only then will our lives be enlightened by the light of love.

The answer is a definite “no” when you think change will occur overnight. It may take years, perhaps centuries, before the world is a much better place, resulting in a more simplified evolution to perfection. If we all do nothing, darkness will muddy the thinking of man, destroying our lives on earth.
