Parker Meeks Named President of TRC's Infrastructure Sector Former partner at McKinsey & Company to focus on strategic growth initiatives

LOWELL, Mass. – TRC, a leading provider of end-to-end engineering, consulting and construction management solutions fueled by innovative technology, announced today that Parker Meeks has been appointed president of its Infrastructure Sector.

Formerly the managing partner of McKinsey & Company's Houston office and founding member of McKinsey's Capital Productivity practice, Meeks will be responsible for strategic growth, customer acquisition and business development.

"Parker has a stellar track record bringing large construction projects to fruition and is an excellent addition to our leadership team," said TRC CEO Chris Vincze. "Our infrastructure sector has been expanding dramatically, and Parker will concentrate on driving additional growth through geographic expansion, cross-selling our infrastructure services in other market sectors and identifying strategic acquisition targets."

Meeks has deep expertise driving both capital project execution and ambitious strategic growth programs across the design/construction landscape, supporting a range of projects and capital programs worth up to $10 billion.

"TRC has a fantastic reputation and I'm thrilled to be joining such a dynamic, client-focused firm as it continues along on its robust growth trajectory," said Meeks.

Meeks holds a Bachelor of Science in electrical engineering from Columbia University and an MBA from Rice University's Jones Graduate School of Management.
