The Best Political Campaigns, Women and Young Leaders from Latin America & Spain to be Honored in Washington, DC

One of the most nominated campaigns is for the current Mexican President, Andrés Manuel López Obrador. In the 2018 elections, President Obrador won an obvious majority by gaining 53% of the votes. His campaign manager, a woman who successfully spearheaded his campaign in a heavily male dominated industry, will receive one of the Napolitans' ten, highly coveted Most Influential Women in Political Communication awards.

The Napolitan Victory Awards also honor thirty young rising political stars under thirty years old. These current and future politicians, political professionals and activists win the Academy's Rising Stars awards for their work in shaping the economic future of Spanish-speaking countries.

Considered the most prestigious of accolades in political communications for Spanish-speaking audiences, the Napolitan Victory Awards will recognize 100 professionals who have developed the most effective political campaigns for native Spanish speakers worldwide. Past recipients have also included United States' political consultants, Dick Morris and David Axelrod. The Napolitan Victory Awards will specifically honor political professionals who work in the press corps, digital and technological media, the audiovisual industry, academic institutions, and as authors of political books and magazines, and more.

Award recipients and nominees will be honored at the Napolitan Victory Awards' Gala on Saturday April 6, 2019 at the Organization of American States in Washington, D.C.

About the Napolitan Victory Awards

The Napolitan Victory Awards are named for Joseph Napolitan, widely regarded as the father of modern political consulting. Since 2012, the Napolitan Victory Awards have been held and hailed by the international media as the Oscars of Politics. The Napolitan Victory Awards are the major international award that honors the talent and work of professionals in political communications, election campaigns, and governments. The awards also recognize exceptional contributions in digital and technological media, the press corps, academic institutions, leaders in freedom, democracy, and political excellence.

The Napolitan Victory Awards are presented by The Washington Academy of Political Arts & Sciences™ and the awardees are ranked and chosen by voting members of the Academy.

The Napolitan Victory Awards will be held on April 6 in the Organization of American States in Washington, D.C., and will also stream live on Facebook, sponsored by Auguro and Global Digital Media Services, Inc.
