

Cloud | AG

Cloud AG and Rojoli Technologies Announce Merger

Peachtree Corners, GA - April 1, 2019 - For Immediate Release

Cloud AG, a Microsoft cloud service provider, today announced it has reached an agreement to merge with Rojoli Technologies, a provider of cloud and managed IT services.

President and CEO of Cloud AG, David Huseonica, says of the decision to combine companies, “We have been working closely with Rojoli on joint clients for the past two years and realized we could serve our customers better by joining forces to offer exceptional service and expertise. Rojoli has been providing cloud and on-premise solutions to businesses for over 10 years and this merger will significantly increase our solutions and resources.”

David also assured Cloud AG’s 100+ clients recently in a personal email, “Even though we are retiring the Cloud AG name to become Rojoli, our staff remains intact and the only difference our customers will notice is an expanded set of IT products and services designed to bring more value to small and medium-sized businesses.”

Cloud AG started in 2013 and grew to become one of Microsoft’s and AvePoint’s most successful cloud partners. For additional information, contact Clay Hovater at (678) 876-3074 or chovater@rojoli.com.

About Cloud AG

Cloud AG provides expertise, products and services to assist companies of all sizes in maximizing the business value of Microsoft’s Office 365 and Azure cloud platforms. Founded in 2013, Cloud AG has worked with hundreds of companies deploying thousands of seats of Microsoft, AvePoint and ServicePoint365 cloud solutions.

About Rojoli

Rojoli Technologies has been providing cloud and on-premises solutions to businesses since 2008. Based in Georgia, Rojoli has operations and data centers in Atlanta, New York, Chicago and Phoenix. Solutions include a full array of products and services including Office 365, cloud hosting, security services, disaster recovery, networking and managed services. To learn more visit www.rojoli.com.