Q. I'm new to online learning. Any tips?

JMHS makes it easy to learn and study online. In fact, all online students are required to take an "Introduction to Online Learning" course to help you get started. This is where you'll learn the difference between an online and traditional education, computer fundamentals, how to study effectively, the principles of time management, how to improve your written communication skills, how to familiarize yourself with the JMHS Online Handbook, and more. This course is not available for those purchasing single courses.

Q. When can I start classes?

There are classes starting almost every day, so you'll never find yourself waiting for a new semester to start.

Q. Who teaches my courses?

JMHS courses are taught by seasoned educators who are also working professionals in the fields they teach. You will benefit from their professional experience and gain real insight into what it is like to work in your chosen career. All our online instructors and graders are currently, or have been, certified educational instructors in the areas in which they grade or teach.

Q. Who do I contact for assistance?

Students can always contact an Advisor for questions regarding the application process, programs of study, delivery of materials, and much more. James Madison's Advisors are dedicated to you from enrollment through graduation. Once a student joins the Ashworth Community, they can continue to enlist the services of our service advisors online as well as our tutors, for help with their studies. Tutors are also available by email or phone during office hours.

Q. What if I'm not going to college?

Many high school graduates prefer to enter the workforce and start earning income. Our vocational high school programs can help you get a jump-start on your career while completing your high school requirements. They can teach you the practical, hands-on techniques you need to succeed in the real world.

Q. Can I continue and earn a college degree from Ashworth College?

Yes. Ashworth College offers a broad range of Certificate, Career Diploma, and Associate and Bachelor's degree programs. With over 100 career-focused programs to choose from, you can match your studies to your career goals.

James Madison High School has been a leading distance education high school for over 20 years, offering one of the world's most affordable, accredited and convenient ways for students to get a high school diploma and career training that employers will respect. Diploma Programs

Why go for a high school diploma instead of just a GED? Surveys show that students and employers value a diploma over a GED, because it shows you've actually earned an education. A GED is only a test.

James Madison High School offers four online diploma program areas:

- General – An easy way for you to get an accredited diploma that employers will respect.
- College Prep - The smartest way to get to college. You'll be better prepared to take on the challenges of a college education and beyond.
- Vocational – For students looking to earn a high school diploma and get a jump-start on a successful career in Computers, Healthcare or Skilled Trades. When you graduate, you'll have both the diploma and the vocational skills that will impress employers.
- Single Courses – Perfect if you want to earn additional credits, graduate early, or make up a missed or failed class.

Q. What is Distance Education?

Distance education is a flexible way to earn your high school diploma. As a James Madison student, you'll receive your coursework online, so you can study whenever you want while receiving the personal support you need to succeed. Best of all, JMHS is extremely affordable. Without all the overhead costs of a traditional high school, your education dollars go even further.

Q. What is homeschooling?

Homeschooling is a legal option for parents wanting to provide their children with a different learning environment than exists in nearby schools. To support this alternate learning method, James Madison High School provides a high quality curriculum, grading/feedback, tutoring support, an interactive community, and an accredited high school diploma.

Q. Why should I pursue my high school diploma now?

Most of today's jobs require at least a high school diploma. Plus, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, high school graduates earn $700 more per month or over $9,000 more per year than employees without a diploma. That makes your affordable JMHS diploma a great investment. And if you're looking to pursue a college degree, the sooner you graduate from JMHS the sooner you can start college.

Q. Will I need to take entrance exams to be accepted?

Entrance exams are not required for admission to JMHS. You can start almost immediately.

Q. Is JMHS accredited and what does that mean for me?

Yes. James Madison High School (part of the Ashworth College family) is regionally accredited by the Distance Education and Training Council. Accreditation is a sign of quality. When a school is accredited, it's proof that it meets the standards set by the U.S. Department of Education. In addition to being nationally accredited by DETC, JMHS is also accredited by The Southern Association of Colleges and Schools Council on Accreditation and School Improvement (SACS CASI). SACS CASI is an accreditation division of AdvancED.

Q. What is included in my tuition?

Everything you need to complete your course work. As a student, you also have access to dedicated advisors, career resources and the innovative virtual Ashworth Community campus. Here you can access Ashworth's online social communities, informative blog posts from instructors, live online info sessions and much more.
